Young people everywhere want to live. They know instinctively that living means fighting and creating.

Since the beginning, the Emmaus movement has shown an interest in young people and encourages them to become actors of their own lives. Young people are often looked upon as passive and marginalised beings; they are often believed to have the “ability to do this, being able to do this, creating. And that living means fighting and creating. Today, there are young people everywhere called upon for it. They know that they want to live. They know that they want to become agents of change. Their group’s name? The “Juntas Podemos” collective. Supported by Emmaus Buenaventura, this collective have decided to become agents of change. Their group’s name? The “Juntas Podemos” collective.

The Americas work camp was an occasion for its participants to learn about the potential of work camps as participative spaces where young people can have access to education, training and development opportunities to relaunch the international work camp movement. The next international work camp will be organised by the Europe region and will be held in France in 2021.

For the collective today, it is a matter of proving to their community in Pereira, Colombia, that they exist. For them, the work camp was an event to show how peaceful they are: “In Pereira, we have 20% of our population in prison. We exist, we fight, we are living. That’s why we should show our community this way of life.”

In the Americas work camp, participants took to the streets to demonstrate against the environmental damage on a global scale. They’re fighting for their own country and want to raise awareness among the people about protesting as about raising awareness among the people. The next World Assembly of the Emmaus International Movement will take place in France in 2021.

Art as a source of emancipation

In Colombia, Fanny Picon has supported the diary initiative “Entrerrecho”, the new generation of human rights defenders. Luis Tenderini, former president of the World Emmaus Movement, national delegate for Colombia, and founding member of the “Podemos” collective. Supported by Emmaus Buenaventura, this collective have decided to become agents of change. Their group’s name? The “Juntas Podemos” collective. Supported by Emmaus Buenaventura, this collective have decided to become agents of change. Their group’s name? The “Juntas Podemos” collective.

In the Americas work camp, participants took to the streets to demonstrate against the environmental damage on a global scale. They’re fighting for their own country and want to raise awareness among the people. The next World Assembly of the Emmaus International Movement will take place in France in 2021.

For the collective today, it is a matter of proving to their community in Pereira, Colombia, that they exist. For them, the work camp was an event to show how peaceful they are: “In Pereira, we have 20% of our population in prison. We exist, we fight, we are living. That’s why we should show our community this way of life.”

In the Americas work camp, participants took to the streets to demonstrate against the environmental damage on a global scale. They’re fighting for their own country and want to raise awareness among the people. The next World Assembly of the Emmaus International Movement will take place in France in 2021.

For the collective today, it is a matter of proving to their community in Pereira, Colombia, that they exist. For them, the work camp was an event to show how peaceful they are: “In Pereira, we have 20% of our population in prison. We exist, we fight, we are living. That’s why we should show our community this way of life.”

In the Americas work camp, participants took to the streets to demonstrate against the environmental damage on a global scale. They’re fighting for their own country and want to raise awareness among the people. The next World Assembly of the Emmaus International Movement will take place in France in 2021.

A peek inside the Americas work camp!

In the Americas work camp, participants took to the streets to demonstrate against the environmental damage on a global scale. They’re fighting for their own country and want to raise awareness among the people. The next World Assembly of the Emmaus International Movement will take place in France in 2021.

After, training and working in the community, the group was then on the move. The Americas work camp participants took to the streets to demonstrate against the environmental damage on a global scale. They’re fighting for their own country and want to raise awareness among the people. The next World Assembly of the Emmaus International Movement will take place in France in 2021.

Podemos” collective. Supported by Emmaus Buenaventura, this collective have decided to become agents of change. Their group’s name? The “Juntas Podemos” collective. Supported by Emmaus Buenaventura, this collective have decided to become agents of change. Their group’s name? The “Juntas Podemos” collective.

In the Americas work camp, participants took to the streets to demonstrate against the environmental damage on a global scale. They’re fighting for their own country and want to raise awareness among the people. The next World Assembly of the Emmaus International Movement will take place in France in 2021.

For the collective today, it is a matter of proving to their community in Pereira, Colombia, that they exist. For them, the work camp was an event to show how peaceful they are: “In Pereira, we have 20% of our population in prison. We exist, we fight, we are living. That’s why we should show our community this way of life.”

In the Americas work camp, participants took to the streets to demonstrate against the environmental damage on a global scale. They’re fighting for their own country and want to raise awareness among the people. The next World Assembly of the Emmaus International Movement will take place in France in 2021.